

Homework Key

It is the spring of hope.

Learning and growing together is a magical experience for both a mother and her child. Every day brings new challenges (those things by which we are measured), new rewards (those things by which we are tempted), and new responsibilities (those things by which we are strengthened). When love is the first part of every occurrence, then each is met with anticipation and confidence.

During playtime, you can have fun with your toddler while you help him learn valuable life lessons.

Read the discussion sheet your client advocate copied for you. It will help you to answer the following questions.

1. What do children need most to become happy and healthy?

You.

2. When should you support toddlers and when should you let them go?

Support them when they need it and let them go when they're ready.

3. What does confidence gained from comfort help a toddler do?

This confidence helps them make friends and manage their emotions.

4. True or False: Interacting with people does not help kids learn.

False.

5. Name four ways toddlers learn:

by seeing, tasting, and touching things

by playing and exploring

by repetition

by watching and imitating you

6. How many words will your child know by age three?

About a thousand.

7. True or False: The more you talk to your child, the sooner they will learn.

True.

8. What are the three best things you can do for your toddler when big feelings surface?

Stay close.

Stay calm.

Let them know you care.
